TURN THAW OUT OF JAIL, SAYS PREMIER

Can't Make Sanctuary of Canada Prison, Is Message to Court.

DEPORTATION CERTAIN.

Judge Delays Decision on Writ, While Auto Waits for Rush to Border.

(Special from a Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)
SHERBROOKE, Quebec, Sept. 2.—The hand of Attorney-General and Premier of Quebec, Sir Lomer Gouin, fell heavily on Harry Thaw to-day and his deportation is practically assured. He is sure only of a respite from court action until to-morrow.

Alme Geoffrin, a famous lawyer and personal representative of Sir Lomer, who watched the earlier proceedings in court with the slightly bored air of a man who holds the final power and is listening to arguments which he knows can have no effect, delivered the message of the Premier to Superior Court Justice Hutchinson in chambers this morning.

The Premier's representative served notice on the Court that unless the writ of habeas corpus on which it was sought to liberate Thaw was sustained to-day by Judge Hutchinson, Sir Lomer would exercise his power to quash all proceedings and liberate Thaw by his own mandate.

Mr. Geoffrin spoke as though he was delivering instructions which must be obeyed.

CAN'T MAKE CANADIAN JAIL A SANCTUARY.
"It is the opinion of the Attorney-General," he said, "that these proceedings have closely approached a scandal in the Canadian courts. This man Thaw is using the County Jail as a sanctuary to escape the operation of Federal process."

"It is a matter of no concern to Canada what happens to Thaw after he leaves jail. Perhaps he is to be deported. I do not care, the great point is that he is using our jail for his own purpose."

OVERWORKED ENGINEER SENDS TRAIN CRASHING INTO STALLED EXPRESS

White Mountain Special Runs Past Signal in New Haven Suburb and Smashes Through Three Wooden Cars of Bar Harbor Express.

Eighteen persons are dead, five more are at the point of death and others may succumb from the effects of injuries received in a rear and collision near North Haven, a suburb of New Haven, to-day, when the first section of the New York bound New York, New Haven and Hartford White Mountain Express dashed, at forty miles an hour, into the rear sleepers of the second section of the Bar Harbor Express, also bound for New York.

This was the most disastrous of a long series of wrecks on the New York, New Haven & Hartford system. The railroad officials issued a statement this afternoon which tended to throw the blame on the engineer of the White Mountain Express, but the engineer, according to friends, has the defense that he has been overworked for the past week and also that the signal system of the section of the line on which the wreck occurred was not adequate in foggy weather such as prevailed this morning.

ENGINEER HAD BEEN DOUBLING UP.

Miller, the engineer of the White Mountain Express, has lived since boyhood in the home of Mrs. E. A. Scott, at Montowese, a suburb of New Haven. Mrs. Scott when seen by an Evening World reporter this afternoon said she had been in communication with Miller and that he told her he was not to blame for the wreck.

"For the past week," declared Mrs. Scott, "Mr. Miller has been doubling up—that is, he has been handling another run besides his own because of the sickness of another engineer. Since last Tuesday he hasn't averaged more than two and half hours' sleep out of each twenty-four. I begged him to lay off, but he said the force was short-handed and the road wanted him to put in extra time."

"During the twenty-four hours preceding the wreck Mr. Scott slept just one hour and a half. He lived here with me and I know. He would barely have time to get home and snatch a nap when he would be called out on the road again."

"He came out to see me after the wreck to-day. He told me it was very foggy and he could not see a mile until he was close to the wreck. He had no idea the train ahead of him had stopped until he was right against it. He says he did not hear any torpedoes and did not see any flagman. For a few minutes before the accident, he said, his train had been running through a mist that cut off his view and wet the rails."

Engineer Miller has been warned by Coroner Mix that, for his own protection, he should not make any statement, but before the warning reached him he had told inquirers that the fog and signal system were to blame.

"The fog was so thick," said Miller, "that I couldn't see the banjo signals until we were almost on top of them. The banjo signal at North Haven was set at danger
